DR. MARY PATTILLO

Chicago Appleseed Center for Fair Courts Board Member & Harold Washington Professor of Sociology and African American Studies at Northwestern University

Dr. Pattillo studies race and ethnicity, urban sociology, inequality, housing, education, criminal legal studies, Black communities, and qualitative methods—with a specific focus on Chicago. Dr. Pattillo investigates the economic, spatial, and cultural forces that affect child-rearing and youth socialization, school and housing choice, gentrification, and other factors that influence family choices in Black middle-class neighborhoods, such as the impact of monetary sanctions - fines, fees, and financial penalties - in the legal system.
